

Letter to the Editor

Rejoinder to "Youth Health Services, Development Programs, and Teenage Birth Rates in 55 California Cities"

Norman A. Constantine and Carmen R. Nevarez

Public Health Institute

© 2006 Californian Journal of Health Promotion. All rights reserved.

Dear Editor:

In regard to Dr. Males' response to our critique of his analyses of California teen birth rate data, we stand by all of our original comments and conclusions. We encourage interested readers to carefully read our original letter and the critiqued article (with special attention to the omission of "city population" as a component of any of the regression models summarized in Dr. Males' Table 3), and to form their own opinions.

Respectfully,

Norman A. Constantine
Public Health Institute, and University of California, Berkeley

Carmen R. Nevarez
Public Health Institute