

Bittersweet

JOHANNA AMEZCUA

An oil painting based on an old photograph of my father and I embracing. A connection that once felt purely sweet now feels bittersweet. Our relationship isn't as strong as it was then. The pink background reflects my childhood innocence and joy, while the darker marks on my father's side represent harsh truth and how growing up can quietly change relationships.