

From the Stone

Damián Galván

In the orange grove, there was a man playing
Spanish guitar;
blonde and isolated.
People went by,
listening,
and without much
to say.
Strings picked
at the dangling citrus.
The man
continued until
noon;
in shade.